Weds Robert C. Dimpfel.

Eluding their relatives and friends, Robert C. Dimpfel and Miss Louise M. Gill, of Baltimore, were quietly married here Thursday by Rev. J. B. McLaughlin. They are now at the St. James Hotel. After taking in the sights of the city, Mr. and Mrs. Dimpfel will return to Baltimore to seek forgiveness of the latter's mother, who opposed the match. Mrs. Dimpfel is known as one of the most beautiful girls of Catonsville, a fashionable suburb of Baltimore. She is fashionable suburb of Baltimore. She is the daughter of Mrs. Philip W. Nettie M. Bunker brought suit for maintenance in the District Supreme Court yesterday against Edward N. Bunker, a ompositor in the Government Printing

Mrs. Bunker says she was married to the defendant in Falmouth, Mass., on July 26, 1896. She was given alimony, she says, during the pendency of a suit for limited divorce which she instituted, charging desertion and drunkeaness, and which was dismissed in April last. She declares that since her temporary alimony was discontinued she has no means of support for herself and an adopted daughter eleven years old.
